Service Foods Launches Mobile Website

All-natural, organic food mobile website ServiceFoods.mobi now available from Service Foods, a leader in home-delivered foods

ATLANTA, November 8—Service Foods, a leading provider of organic and all-natural foods for home delivery, has launched a mobile-optimized version of its website as part of an initiative to increase accessibility, convenience and health awareness for clients.

The mobile-friendly ServiceFoods.mobi allows clients to browse health materials, information on the company's organic food and all-natural products, along with calorie and nutrition calculators. A new feature available to Service Foods clients, the four calculators enable users to track their weight loss, body mass index and calorie burn rate, as well as determine nutritional values.

The calculators are valuable tools for checking almost any food for its content of glucose, carbohydrates, proteins, cholesterol and sodium, which is vital for people managing diabetes, high blood pressure, heart disease and other common health concerns. The mobile site allows the calculators to be easily utilized while in grocery stores and restaurants so that anyone with a mobile device can determine the proper foods to help them maintain a healthy lifestyle.

“We are excited to make the site and free calculators available to the general public and offer people across the country a mobile solution for their health and wellness needs,” said Dr. Keith Kantor, Service Foods’ CEO. “We’re committed to improving America’s health one family at a time, nationwide, and the mobile website and calculators are natural extensions of that dedication. We understand that our clients have busy lives, and the mobile site makes it simple for anyone to view our health and fitness information and make smart food choices while on the go.”

The mobile website is compatible with and can be accessed on most popular mobile phones, platforms and devices, including Android, Blackberry, iPad and iPhone.

The mobile technology introduced with the new website fits with Service Foods’ commitment to deliver a total health and wellness experience to clients. In addition to interacting with clients through tools like social media, video, audio and printed newsletters, the company also provides expert education and insight on the health benefits of eating right and the common diseases that are often linked with consuming unhealthy foods through free articles on topics including ADHD, diabetes and food allergies/anaphylaxis. Service Foods clients also have 24/7 access to advice and tips from a staff of dietitians, nurses, fitness experts and certified all-natural chefs.
